Temporary Changes to Requirements of Educator Certification Regulations

The COVID-19 pandemic has impacted education in RI in various ways, including educators applying for or renewing their certificates.

On June 16, 2020, action was taken by the Council to grant approval to the Commissioner to make temporary changes to some requirements for educator certification regulations. These changes remained in effect until December 31, 2020. Since most required certification tests have been available since June 2020 (either via the ETS Praxis Tests at Home option or the reopening of RI Prometric centers for in-person testing) and courses at RI institutions of higher education and educator preparation programs have been available via in-person, virtual, or hybrid modes of instruction, widespread barriers to educators meeting certification requirements have mostly been resolved.

Though we do not anticipate that many educators need additional flexibilities for their certification requirements, the Council on Elementary and Secondary Education has granted the Commissioner approval to allow for individual flexibilities for educators facing extreme circumstances. These revised temporary changes apply to educators who are either seeking certification in RI, or are renewing certificate(s) expiring in July/August of 2021. Changes will be implemented through the Office of Educator Excellence and Certification Services by way of the application process, and will remain in effect until September 15, 2021. Allowing for these changes ensures that those educators directly impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic and facing extreme circumstances have the means to request individualized flexibilities.

The chart below is a listing of the certificate types and the revised COVID-19 Temporary Changes to Requirements of Educator Certification Regulations.

Educators impacted by these changes must submit a paper application to the certification office
